Title:	Visiting Nurse Association of Allegheny County records
ID:	PU-N.MC 106
Date [inclusive]:	1918-1990
Physical Description:	6.5 Linear Feet
Language of the Material:	English .
Abstract:	The records of the Visiting Nurse Association of Allegheny County document a wide range of issues in home nursing that appeared in the period from the association's founding in 1919, up to the high-tech period of home care in the 1980s. The collection includes Board of Directors minutes, committee reports, and some substation files. There is a significant amount of material documenting the advances in the agency's health care practices. One of the ways that home care changed was in moving away from the care of patients with declining communicable diseases such as tuberculosis, and moving towards more specialized care like chemotherapy. This collection also includes 300 photographs and several scrapbooks.

Historical Sketch

Pittsburgh of 1918 was a city in its industrial heyday but the wounds of World War I were still fresh and citizens recalled the deleterious effects of the wartime nursing shortage. On top of that, the city's health care system had to deal with a massive influenza pandemic that affected over 23,000 Pittsburgh residents in only an 11 week period. These events pointed to serious shortcomings in Pittsburgh's public health services.

In response to this, the Women's Division of the Allegheny County Council of Defense, under the leadership of Annie E. McCord, conducted a survey of county public health services. With the cooperation of Alice E. Stewart of the Tuberculosis League and Katherine Olmstead of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, the survey indicated there were, at the time, some 100 public health nurses under the control of over thirty separate and independent organizations. Much of their territory and functions overlapped which resulted in lackluster (and often inadequate) service.

A score of meetings and conferences followed to gain cooperation from the various public health employers. A fund raising campaign was launched and, upon the recommendation of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, Miss Nan L. Dorsey was invited to become the organizer of the Special Committee for Public Health Nursing. Miss Dorsey was a tireless administrator and fundraiser. She successfully solicited funding from various agencies and, in the following year, she became the first director of the newly formed Public Health Nursing Association of Pittsburgh (PHNA).

Founded in 1919 by the citizens' committee, PHNA offered skilled nursing care on a visiting basis to the sick in their homes. In its first year of operation, PHNA opened six nursing centers (substations) with 28 nurses, a registrar and a stenographer on the staff. In 1920, PHNA branched out to outlying county areas and became affiliated with six local hospitals to provide public health experience for undergraduate nurses. The Association would later (in 1949) become the Visiting Nurse Association of Allegheny County.

The agency grew rapidly in the 1920s, responding to the needs of the poor sick in a heavily industrialized city. Service was extended to more county areas and special programs were added. In its early years, the agency emphasized maternal and child health services and control of communicable diseases. Programs in prenatal care, pre-school health clinics, nutrition and well-baby clinics were developed.

In 1926, Nan Dorsey left the agency to accept a position with the Red Cross in England. Her successor, Helen V. Stevens, directed the agency until 1947. During the 1930s, under Stevens' leadership, the agency's services were extended to cover the entire county so that by 1939 there were 11 substations.

The agency changed its name in 1949 to the Visiting Nurse Association of Allegheny County (VNAAC) and began to focus on the unmet home care needs of the ill and their families. In 1957, the Allegheny County Health Department assumed responsibility for maternal, child health and communicable disease services.

VNAAC witnessed dramatic increases in elderly, chronically ill and handicapped patients during the 1950s and 1960s. In response to this, rehabilitation and supportive services were developed. Physical therapists, speech pathologists, and social workers were added and stroke rehabilitation groups were begun.

The tumultuous 1960s and 1970s brought radical changes in health care as well as in American society. Clinical specialization had arrived in home health care. The agency heralded the new era of acute care in the home by hiring nurse clinicians trained in oncological, cardiovascular and pulmonary care. Specialty programs in renal and hospice were also developed.

The 1980s saw new leadership under Andrew Peacock, the present director, who was appointed in 1983. The agency continues to address spiraling health costs and to utilize high-technology therapies such as intravenous chemotherapy.
